

Janarric Sea Runes

Along Italy's beautiful coastline live many traditional sea witches, who have created a set of symbols to activate and "fire up" their spellworkings, a beautiful visual language that draws exclusively upon the power of the sea. They are similar to runes, although they bear more immediate resemblance to the angelic alphabet developed by Dr John Dee in the sixteenth century. The Janarric sea runes are simple to recreate, but for them to work, they need to be drawn out in a devotional way. When you do this, the shapes hold real power, and truly communicate their message. Practise drawing them a few times, and see if you relate to the symbol and if it appeals to you. Then, if so, it can be etched into a magical tool, like a necklace, crane bag, athame, cauldron or simply drawn in the sand, as a blessing and way of communicating quickly and powerfully with the beings of the sea.

They can also be tattooed, or etched for a time on to the skin with henna or body paint, to bring about what it is you wish for. They are powerful symbols, the language of the sea gods, and they are to be used wisely and well. However, do not be afraid – we all use symbols, all the time – consider the power of the Coca-Cola logo or the Shell oil company sign. Working with our own symbols is far more powerful and wise than simply drifting in a sea of symbols of capitalism and environmental greed and destruction. Choosing the symbols you surround yourself with will increase the magic in your days, and help you sail the seas of your life with purpose and direction!
